Module Description

The purpose of the Module is to examine and analyze the regulation of those legal relationships that present alien elements. The general part of private international law examines the main principles and function methods of private international law. In the specific part (civil international law) the special private relations (general principles, obligations, property law, family and inheritance international law) are analyzed, which present alien elements. Issues of procedural international law (international jurisdiction, recognition and execution of judgments in civil, family, inheritance and commercial cases), judicial cooperation and assistance, as well as the law of Greek and Cypriot nationality are also examined.
